Kris Bryant has reached safely in his last 15 games since the start of interleague play. The Cubs last met in 2014 with the White Sox playing a doubleheader at Wrigley Field and the teams splitting a two-game set at Wrigley Field. Bryant is batting .275 against the White Sox in 2017. Bryant has three home runs against the White Sox this season, including a walk-off three-run shot at Wrigley Field on April 10.

WALK-OFF WINNER: The Chicago Cubs, winners of three straight games and sitting atop the NL Central, have won four straight games over .500, today playing a contest that was postponed against the New York Yankees on Thursday due to inclement weather in Chicago. The Cubs have scored at least one run in the first inning in each of their last four games, and they lead the majors with a 6.27 average in strikeouts against left-handed pitchers. The Cubs have scored four runs or more in their last 11 games against lefties, and they have a 6.04 ERA against left-handed batters.

CUBS VS. YANKS: The Cubs and Yankees meet for their sixth series since the start of the interleague play. The teams last met in 2014, with the Cubs leading the series 3-2. The Yankees have since won both series since 2014, and the Cubs have won two of six games since the start of the series. The Cubs are 4-2 vs. the Yankees since 2014, but they have lost their last two games in the series.

MILESTONE: Kris Bryant has reached safely in his last 15 games since the start of interleague play. The teams last met in 2014 with the White Sox playing a doubleheader at Wrigley Field and the teams splitting a two-game set at Wrigley Field. Bryant is batting .275 against the White Sox in 2017. Bryant has three home runs against the White Sox this season, including a walk-off three-run shot at Wrigley Field on April 10.
